

The Importance of SYO

It's hard to imagine a business without PCs. They are a major part of most tasks, however having the technology in your building is only the beginning.

These systems can make your employees more productive than ever before when used properly, however the training and software support associated with each employee can be very expensive.

Many companies allocate their primary resources for their core business, and a fully staffed support department can be cost-prohibitive. This is where SYO, a fully functioning technical support and solutions provider, comes in. SYO can be your IT department or, if your computers are currently managed by a staff member, SYO can be a priceless resource for that person (answering questions, providing advice, delivering new products, and repairing the old) this is what we do, and we do it well.

Industry analysts estimate that 85% of the cost of owning a PC is related to equipment support. By calling SYO for your support needs, we can reduce that to 39%.

Outsource to SYO and tap the resources and experience of a company that has dealt with issues like yours in the past. With over 100 years of collective on-the-job experience, the SYO staff is ready to meet your challenges.
